European Market Headlines

Most European markets ended in negative territory yesterday, with the exception of the French CAC 40, as investors reacted negatively to Wednesday's pullback on Wall Street. In addition, investor sentiment was affected by the release of a weaker-than-expected German business confidence report. The Stoxx 600 lost 0.2% to close at 380.34 index points, with a 0.4% decline in the FTSE 100 featuring among the worst performers. This downtick comes in spite of a 4.4% surge in Barclays after the group reported a 10% increase in its 2017 pretax profit. Lastly, the German DAX ended 0.07% lower, but this was partly offset by a 0.13% increase in the French CAC 40.
